Bristol volunteer firemen are well represented at Perkasie today at the 24th annual convention of the Bucks County Firemen's Association, taking place in that borough.

Nearly 300 members of the Bristol volunteer department are attending the session, and nearly half that number will be uniformed in the line of march today. The group made the journey accompanied by Chief Franklin Gilkeson. The American Legion Cadet Bugle Corps is also represented, and four pieces of the volunteer companies' apparatus was taken by the men.

Fire fighting equipment from Bristol Fire Company, No. 1; America Hose, Hook and Ladder Company, No. 2; Goodwill Fire Company, No. 3, and Beaver Fire Company, No. 4, were taken to the convention town.

PERKASIE, June 9.—Bucks County Firemen's Association met in convention here last night. Officers were elected for the ensuing year, committees and officers submitted their annual and quarterly reports and numerous addresses of interest to the firemen were made.

The attendance was perhaps the largest of any recent convention there being approximately 400 men present.

The address of welcome was delivered by Chief Burgess Goff and this was replied to by President James E. Groome, of the County Association. Other addresses were made by Judge Eugene E. Bonnwell, of Philadelphia; the Rev. S. E. Moyer, pastor of Reformed Church here; John Nolan, president of Chester County Firemen's Association; Frank Soule, fire marshal of Chester County; William T. Muldrew, president of Montgomery County Firemen's Association.

One new company joined the Association last night—Warminster Township.

Thirty-three of the 39 companies had delegates present.

Officers were elected as follows:

President, James E. Groome, Yardley; vice-president, Thomas E. Stockham, Morrisville; vice-president, Lloyd Crouthamel, Dublin; vice-president, Raymond Struck, Quakertown; secretary, William K. Krout, Perkasie; financial secretary, Fred M. Sherman, Newtown; treasurer, Louis Leedom, Yardley; fire marshal, William L. Stackhouse, Hulmeville; chaplain, Rev. S. E. Moyer, Perkasie.

William L. Stackhouse, county fire marshal, submitted his annual and quarterly report. The annual report is published in full elsewhere in this issue. The quarterly report showed a loss due to fire amounting to $91,000, with insurance amounting to $57,000. The value of the property at risk is given as $156,000.

TRADE NOTES

This seems to be a good time to purchase furniture according to the advertisements of Bristol's leading furniture houses in last night's Courier.

Spencer and Sons, Mill and Radcliffe streets, announced their June special sale with some wonderful reductions on staple articles.

Louis Dries, furniture dealer at Pond and Mill streets, also has a number of choice bargains to offer at this time, which would be worth looking into.

The Factors-to-You Furniture Co., at 225 Mill street, commenced their anniversary sale last week and are going strong, according to Mr. Cantwell, local manager. A circular has just been distributed advertising furniture at amazing low prices.

CARD PARTY

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Harriman Hospital will hold a public card party in the auxiliary rooms on Radcliffe street on Monday evening at eight-thirty o'clock sharp. Pinocchio and "500" will be played and beautiful prizes will be awarded. A large attendance is expected.

S. LANGHORNE SCOUTS OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Thomas Ross, Doylestown, Is the Speaker of The Occasion

TELLS OF SCOUT WORK

S. LANGHORNE, June 9.—At first annual birthday party of Troop 1 of South Langhorne, at the Red Men's Hall, South Langhorne recently, Thomas Ross as the principal speaker of the evening was very fittingly introduced by Toastmaster John S. Lappan, as "One of Bucks County's front rank attorneys and an active enthusiastic Scout Booster." Vice President Ross in his remarks stated "Parents should visit the Scout Troops and see the splendid work that is going on there."

The Boy Scout organization is giving your son an opportunity to work off his surplus steam through interest arousing activities, camp, and hikes. There is no discrimination either of race or creed the Boy Scout Movement welcomes every boy. All boys are on the same level in Scouting whether rich man's son or poor man's. You parents can give your Scout master considerable encouragement by an occasional word of appreciation, and by actually attending Troop Meetings." Henry Palmer, Chairman of the Camp Committee and one of the leading business men of South Langhorne spoke on the "Daily Good Turn," "Scout Oath and Scout Laws," and emphasized the thought "that the more you get into this Scout Work the stronger it grips and holds you."

Other speakers on the evening program were, Chairman of the Troop Committee Thomas Brennan, Burgess Charles Doyle, Scoutmaster Charles Briegle, and Assistant Scoutmaster S. A. Miller. A number of musical selections by local artists, and a "clog dancing exhibition comprised a well rounded program. The surprise of the evening was the two course dinner served by the Troop Committee to everyone who was present. Over one hundred and twenty-five fathers, mothers, and friends were present. Credit is due Scout Committee man John S. Lappan for having arranged such a successful affair.

Five tables of bridge were formed. The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Christian, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Lester D. Thorne, of Bristol; Mr. and Mrs. George Lafferty, of Narberth; Miss Elizabeth Green, of Bristol; Mr. Leathen, of Philadelphia; Miss Helen Taylor, of Bristol; and Mr. Paul Forster; Miss Mae Ward and Mr. Carson Sims, of Philadelphia; Mr. Grant and Miss Powell, of Philadelphia; Miss Agnes Doyle, of Philadelphia; Miss Helen Armor and Mr. George Tyson, of Philadelphia; and Mr. Frederick Worrell, of Chestertown, Md.

LOWER AIR MAIL RATES

No little importance is attached to Postmaster General New's order cutting the new rate for air mail to 5 cents an ounce after August 1. Aviation and all users of the mails welcome the news.

The lower rate is made possible by development of the air mail service to a point where it is relatively cheap and surprisingly reliable. Planes can deliver mail in much less time than railroad delivery requires and after August 1 the cost of the faster service will be but little more than that of the slower rail mail. Moreover, the danger of delay through accident is about the same.

Low air mail rates will mean a wider use of this service, which in turn will bring about the opening of new air mail lines and the further development of existing routes. The service will be provided wherever the demand is sensed. The only thing that has retarded the development of the air mails was the high cost.

Aviation will profit from the 5-cent rate, for everything that places more planes in operation and makes the public air conscious helps the industry. The public must be taught to use aviation just as it had to be taught to use the railroad and the automobile.

Postmaster General New has unlocked the door to an air mail system reaching into every state, and serving every community either directly or through the auxiliary railway mail service.

COOLIDGE GOES TO WISCONSIN

Again the Middle West lures the man in the white house. No sooner had congress gone into its summer recess than President Coolidge announced his own vacation plans, chief among which is the selection of a fishing lodge on the Brule River in Wisconsin for his summer "white house."

Wherever a president goes politicians and the public seek a political reason for his going. The question is more difficult to answer this year because of Mr. Coolidge's apparent determination to get out of national politics.

It seems a little absurd to connect his proposed Wisconsin visit with his veto of the McNary-Haugen bill and his choice of camps has no relation to the national conventions because both will probably be concluded soon after he leaves Washington.

There are several possible explanations that sound far more plausible and reasonable. There is good fishing in the Brule River, and the president is an enthusiastic convert to the contemplative man's recreation. It is not unlikely that he is seeking another vacation like those in the Black Hills and in the Adirondacks.

Cedar Island Lodge has another attraction for a man of the temperament of Mr. Coolidge. It is far enough from civilization to give him quiet and solitude, yet near enough to keep him in constant touch with affairs of state, with which he is as deeply concerned as he is desirous of unburdening himself of them.

The American people are in for another summer of fish stories by, and of the president.

Love makes the world go round, without enough sleep.

One thing about powder on a man's coat lapel is it shows he hasn't had experience enough to brush it off.

CALVIN E. JAMES ESCAPES FROM COURT ATTACHES; IS LATER CAUGHT

(REPRINTED FROM YESTERDAY'S EXTRA EDITION OF COURIER)

(By International News Service)

DOYLESTOWN, June 8.—Calvin E. James, 26 year old dapper Upper Darby salesman, convicted slayer of Harold Dunstan of this borough and charged with the slaying of his wife's two uncles at Jamison, made a last desperate, but futile, attempt to escape this afternoon when taken to the county Criminal Court here where arguments were to be heard on his appeal for a new trial.

The slayer escaped from the Sheriff and Deputy Sheriff, and head jail keeper, Grant Myers, when they removed his handcuffs. After reaching the rear of the floor in the county criminal court room, James dashed madly down one flight of the steps leading to the street, pursued by Deputy Sheriff Horace E. Gwinner and Sheriff T. Hart Ross. He ran across the lawn of the Court House. When he failed to comply with Sheriff Ross's command to halt, the Sheriff fired at him, but the bullet passed over his head.

The Deputy Sheriff was between the Sheriff and James, thus preventing an accurate aim on the part of the Sheriff. James ran up Court street where he eluded Sheriff Ross and Deputy Sheriff Gwinner.

District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn who had followed the trio discovered James hiding behind a hedge about half a block up Court street, and finally recaptured him, after a struggle.

When Eastburn called to James to come out and surrender, he jumped over the hedge and ran another block and a half up the street with Eastburn in pursuit. The District Attorney finally captured him against a stone wall and his outcry brought Sheriff Ross and Deputy Sheriff Gwinner to his aid.

Jumping into his machine Deputy Sheriff Horace Gwinner gave chase, but owing to the hedge concealing the escaped prisoner, the latter was hidden from view, and Gwinner passed by. His attention was soon called to the murderer in hiding, however, and he turned back.

James was taken back to the court room where the arguments were heard for his application for a new trial.

The attempted escape aroused the entire city. Residents came rushing to the scene with shot guns and other weapons to aid in the capture of the convicted slayer.

Judge William C. Ryan, after hearing lengthy arguments by counsel for the convicted man, took the case into consideration, and held the decision in the motion for a new trial over until next week.

When James was brought back to the court room he refused to talk. His face had a deathlike palor and he looked haggard and worn. The chase had worked him up considerably and he showed the effects of his short time in prison.

For the first time, Thelma James, sister of the convicted man, from Washington, was present at court. She sat on the Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Buckwell, San Francisco boss, with lawyer, Brandon, attempts to gain possession of Vasquez ranch, occupied by Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter Dolores. Terry, Brandon's nephew, who loves Dolores, discloses their plot. Terry and Dolores have misunderstanding. Dolores falls into Buckwell's clutches. Terry saves her. Angered, Buckwell uses force to oust Vasquez, but is defeated. He tries again, but Vasquez beats Terry's warning and confronts Buckwell. Vasquez dies from stroke caused by Buckwell's threats. Dolores, alone in the world, discovers Buckwell's Chinese origin and tells Terry. They expose Buckwell, but he discovers their action and kidnaps them both.

and stepping closer slipped the silken cord over her head.

As far as Lu Fong was concerned, the incident was over. Clapping his hands three times in quick succession, he stood like a statue and waited until a native servant appeared.

"Show my friends," he instructed significantly, "above to the street and see that no harm befalls them."

And then before Dolores and Terry knew what was happening they were bowed from the room.

The guide led them through a strange tunnel-like passage which eventually brought them into a Chinese curio shop.

The keeper was there alone working busily at nothing. He and the guide exchanged brief nods and jointly opened the double doors to permit their master's friends to pass out unmolested.

Terry and Dolores thanked the keeper for the fresh night air and looked about to get their bearings.

They were on Du Pont street, a short walk away from the cafe they had entered earlier in the evening.

"Terry, I never want to come to any of these places again," said Dolores vehemently.

"And you never will. I have had my lesson at bringing you out—it is the last time." And sighing gratefully that it was all over without mishap, he helped her into the carriage.

"I want Señor Buckwell to be punished—" Dolores was almost overcome from the emotional strain and could say no more.

"Yes!" Lu Fong bared his teeth like a tiger ready for the promised kill.

The other Chinamen were no less cruel in their expressions and anticipation of revenge.

"Let the word spread," announced Lu Fong, rising with calm as-

"There they are," nodded Buckwell as the carriage drove past. "Get busy—you know your orders."

As soon as Buckwell gave the word his henchmen rushed out in the street and swung on the carriage steps—one on either side. Quicker than it takes to tell about it Jimmie stuffed a gag in Dolores's mouth and the Texas Kid subjected Terry to the same treatment, in addition to snapping a pair of bracelets on his wrists. Deprived of hands and voice, Terry used his feet to great advantage in the pit of the Texas Kid's stomach. The bottom of the carriage was a scrambled mass of men until Jimmie snapped another pair of handcuffs around his victim's ankles. Terry was powerless.

He and Dolores looked into each other's eyes. A world of love and agonized misgivings flashed from one to the other.

Terry cursed himself again and again for having brought Dolores, and he shuddered at what was probably in store for her.

"Can the soft looks," commented Jimmie. "Say, Pete," he continued, reaching up and poking the driver in the back, "the gang's all here—let's go home!"

"Sure we'll get there—these horses ain't half bad. And the driver turned around to show his grinning face to the surprised young man and woman in the back.

He was not the man Terry had originally engaged!

Chris Buckwell sauntered out from his shadow and stopped to light a cigar. He was well satisfied. His plans had been made and executed within a half hour after San Toy rushed to him with her report. A cruel light gleamed in his eyes as he realized that those who were trying to destroy him were now in his power.

With the quick, silent motion of a snake San Toy, unnoticed, slid out of the room from between the drawn curtain and sped on her way to tell Buckwell the arresting news.

"When will you ask Señor Buckwell to account for himself?" inquired Terry.

"Before another sun has set," promptly replied Lu Fong with decision. "We will call on him tomorrow and disclose our information."

Dolores nodded her approval.

Lu Fong saw and for the first time indulged in a smile. It was a gentle smile of appreciation, and Dolores was not the least annoyed.

"It would give me pleasure to confer upon you a token of my thanks," said Lu Fong in a voice that indicated a niceness of which he was not generally thought capable, and turning to an ornate chest on a nearby table he selected an exquisitely handsome jade ornament on a slender silken cord.

"Accept it, please, as a token of my gratitude," and bowing low he offered it to Dolores.

She admired the beautiful ornament and instinctively reached for it, but drew back and shook her head when she saw his long, slightly curved finger nails.

Terry noticed her hesitancy and nudging her on the elbow indicated that she had better take it. Lu Fong's head was still bowed and fortunately he did not notice.

"Thank you; it is lovely," said Dolores. She extended her hand gingerly to be sure that she would not touch the Chinaman, but to her surprise he appeared not to notice.

She closed them tightly. Tears forced their way through the long lashes and rolled down her cheeks. She did not open them again until the sound of Terry's voice made her look at him again.

His gag was being tied on more securely, so a quick twist of his head afforded momentary freedom, and, regardless of the fact that Dolores could hear, he cursed his captors with vehemence that aroused their admiration.

The Eternal Triangle — Love, Fear and Jealousy

"HANGMAN'S HOUSE"
with Victor McLaglen

A fascinating romance of thwarted hate, satisfied vengeance, a woman's faith and a love that conquered jealousy. See Victor McLaglen, the "Captain Flagg" of "What Price Glory," in his latest and greatest role, a soldier of the Foreign Legion scouring his enemies.

This is a romance of racing and race intrigue pictured among the peat bogs and fens of Ireland and in the environs of the home of "Jimmie the Hangman," master of the sinister "Hangman's" castle.

Inherits a Throne

Thousands will be envious of the stripling pictured above, for he inherits the overlordship of a million subjects and more wealth than he can possibly spend in a lifetime. He is Martanda Sydney, twelve, son of the late Rajah of Pudukota, who died suddenly in the American Hospital at Neuilly, France. Martanda's uncle will act as regent until he is twenty-one.
